

Acknowledgments . . vii

Introduction . . 1

PART 1. The Berlin Antisemitism Dispute . . 29

1. Liberals, Antisemites, and "Educated Men" . . 31
2. Jew-hatred and Nationality . . 47
3. German-Jewish "Mixed Culture" . . 63
4. State, Nation, Race, Religion . . 91
5. Emancipation, Assimilation, and the Concept of Rights . . 146
6. The Riddle of Treitschke's Intentions . . 155
7. Dissent and Consensus in the Berlin Antisemitism Dispute . . 171

PART 2. The State, the Nation, and the Jews . . 189

8. Antisemitism . . 191
 9. Liberalism and National Liberalism . . 221
 10. Nationalism and the Reich of 1871 . . 252
- Conclusion: Antisemitism and the Limits of Liberal Society . . 275

APPENDICES

1. Heinrich von Treitschke's "Our Prospects" (1879) . . 309
2. Moritz Lazarus's "What Does National Mean? A Lecture" (1880) . . 317
3. Open Letter on the Jews by Löb Baruch (Dr. Ludwig Börne) to the Member of the German Reichstag and Heidelberg Professor
Dr. Heinrich Gotthard von Treitschke (Berlin, 1880) . . 360
4. The Berlin Antisemitism Dispute in the Literature . . 378

Notes . . 389

Bibliography . . 475

Index . . 505