

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	v
Glossary	x
 1. Introduction	 1
Scope and purpose	1
Israel as a society of enclaves	4
— Legal expressions of the enclave system	8
— Education and enclaves	10
— The enclave pattern of construction and settlement	13
— Social enclaves	18
Religion as ethnicity	21
The growing prominence of conversion-based religion	24
— Changing what it means to be religious	24
— Conversion as life crisis	26
Social movements	29
— The epidemiological pattern of spread	29
— A project of cultural transformation	36
The research	39
 2. T'shuva meets Ethnicity: the Shas Religious Project	 42
Chabad and Shas: contrasts and similarities in t'shuva	43
What observance means and who codifies the rules	51
North Africa and Morocco: Jewish life before emigration	55
Shas and Sephardi traditions: popular religion at the service of religious institutionalisation	70
 3. T'shuva as Political Mobilisation	 74
Shas and the centralisation of religious authority: the role of the newly religious	74
The machinery of t'shuva	79
— Joining a new community	81
— Mechanisms for transmitting tradition	88

Reclaiming a heritage	90
Ethnicity, hierarchy and marriage	97
Tensions between tradition and stringency in the pursuit of a unified Orthodoxy	102
The experience of t'shuva	106
— Renewal and renunciation	106
— The opposite of pleasure	114
Social capital?	119
4. Shas as a Social Movement	120
The historical project as engagement with modernity and public debate	120
Ovadia Yosef: a defining figure	125
The modernising face of Shas	133
Shas as a political construct: the project of ethnic renewal	145
The historic actor	150
— Supporters' conceptions of Shas	150
— Shas as bodily presence	152
— Shas in the eyes of others	155
— Ethnic disadvantage, mobilisation and voting	160
5. Shas's Penetration of State and Civil Society	169
Mechanisms of reproduction	169
— Shas's involvement in institutional structures	169
— The Shas education system (HaMa'ayan)	170
— The Shas school curriculum	176
— Yeshivas for returnees	178
— Élite Sephardi yeshivas	180
— Shas's use of government funding	184
Ties that bind: the culture of Shas and the social networks of its leadership	187
Reaching out: occupying intermediate spaces	191
— Social entrepreneurship and voluntarism	195
— Political entrepreneurship	198
— Individual initiatives	200
6. Knitting the Strands of Popular Culture	203
Holy pirates	203
— Pirate radios in the broadcasting system	205
— Pirate radios and the t'shuva movement	212

— The cassette tape industry and the t'shuva movement	215
T'shuva and the tension between high and low culture	217
— The mischievous millenarian: the use of parables and myths to subvert official discourse	221
— Autistic and Alzheimer sufferers as oracles	226
The recovery of fragments from tradition	228
— Popular religion in the t'shuva movement	234
— From giving to gossip	238
— The nature of religious norms	241
— Memorability: converts learn fast	243
— Cascading demarcations and the increasingly central role of the t'shuva movement in the haredi world	247
7. Conclusions	251
Fragmentation and coalescence: enclaves and their boundaries	251
Shas and politics: a troublesome guest	257
Globalisation	259
Socialisation and conversion	260
— Family	260
— Rationalisation and the miraculous	262
— The question of popular religion	263
Religion, family and social capital	270
Bibliography	279
Index	291