

TABLE OF CONTENTS

List of Figures	xiii
List of Maps.	xxii
Acknowledgement.	xxiii
Abbreviations of Often-Used Sources.	xxiv
 Introduction	 1
 Chapter One
Evolution and ancient synagogues.	18
1.1. Re-assessing past scholarship.	18
1.2. 'Normative Judaism' and the forbidden image	19
1.3. Synagogue scholarship in the early nineteenth century . . .	20
1.4. Beginnings of the evolutionary theory of synagogue plans . . .	22
1.4.1. 'Galilean' synagogues—the 'early' type	23
1.4.2. Synagogues with apses—the 'late' type	24
1.4.3. Broadhouse synagogues—the 'transitional' type. . .	26
1.4.4. How the theory has effected synagogue studies . . .	28
1.5. Galilean regionalism	29
1.6. Recent publications	30
 Chapter Two
Excavated synagogues dating to the Byzantine period.	33
Introduction: Evidence for identification and dating of ancient synagogues	33
2.1. Archaeological evidence for unequivocal synagogues by century.	34
2.1.1. Dated to the Fourth Century	34
2.1.2. Dated to the Fifth Century	40
2.1.3. Dated to the Sixth Century.	50
2.2. Archaeological evidence for undated synagogues or those having equivocal building chronologies.	55
2.2.1. 'En Gedi—Southern Hebron Hills, Palaestina Prima.	55
2.2.2. Susiya—Southern Hebron Hills, Palaestina Prima	56

2.2.3.	Beth She'arim, "Synagogue I and II"—Lower Galilee, Palaestina Secunda	58
2.2.4.	Ma'oz Hayyim, "Building A"—Beth She'an Valley, Palaestina Secunda	59
2.2.5.	Ma'oz Hayyim, "Building B"—Beth She'an Valley, Palaestina Secunda	60
2.2.6.	Ma'oz Hayyim, "Building C"—Beth She'an Valley, Palaestina Secunda	62
2.2.7.	Rehob, "Phase 3"—Beth She'an Valley, Palaestina Secunda	63
2.2.8.	Hammat Tiberias, "Synagogue IIA Severos"—Eastern Lower Galilee, Palaestina Secunda	66
2.2.9.	Hammat Tiberias, "Synagogue IB"—Eastern Lower Galilee, Palaestina Secunda	67
2.2.10.	Arbel, "Synagogue I and II"—Eastern Lower Galilee, Palaestina Secunda	69
2.2.11.	Beth Yerach, "Synagogue"—Eastern Lower Galilee, Palaestina Secunda	70
2.2.12.	Hammat Gader, "Synagogue"—Golan, Palaestina Secunda	71
2.2.13.	Nabratein, "Synagogue 2a and 2b"—Upper Galilee, Palaestina Secunda	72
2.2.14.	Meiron, "Synagogue"—Upper Galilee, Palaestina Secunda	76
2.2.15.	Bar'am, "Synagogue"—Upper Galilee, Palaestina Secunda	79
2.2.16.	Meroth, "Stages A and B"—Upper Galilee, Phoenicia	80
2.2.17.	Meroth, "Stage C"—Upper Galilee, Phoenicia	81
2.3.	Metrological evidence corroborates material evidence for Byzantine dating	82

Chapter Three

	On the 'Orientation' of Ancient Synagogues and Churches	84
	Introduction	84
3.1.	Where was the Divine Presence?	84
3.1.1.	Jewish influence on Christian practice?	85
3.1.2.	Christian influence on Jewish practice	86
3.2.	"Orientation" of synagogues	86
3.2.1.	Jewish prayer toward Jerusalem?	87

3.3.	Christian prayer toward East.	87
3.3.1.	Written sources for prayer toward the East	87
3.4.	Archaeological evidence for Christian direction of prayer	88
3.4.1.	Churches in Palestine	89
3.4.2.	Several churches founded by Constantine have apses in the West	91
3.4.3.	Syrian churches	93
3.5.	Direction of influence: Jewish-Christian, Christian-Jewish, or separate	95
3.6.	Written sources from the Jewish realm	95
3.6.1.	Location of the Divine Presence	96
3.6.2.	Direction of prayer	97
3.7.	Archaeological evidence in synagogues for direction of prayer	99
3.7.1.	Criteria used by archeologists for describing direction of prayer	99
3.8.	An obstacle: view and access to some platforms interrupted by columns and entrances	100
3.9.	An enhanced axis in synagogues	101
3.9.1.	Synagogues at Ma'oz Hayyim and at Rehob near Scythopolis	102
3.10.	Bema and chancel screens in churches and synagogues	102
3.11.	Conclusion	103

Chapter Four

	The 'façade motif' in ancient synagogues	106
4.1.	Introduction: the Torah Scrolls, the Torah Shrine and the 'façade motif'	106
4.1.1.	A 'generic' motif?	109
4.1.2.	The façade motif on synagogue pavements	111
4.2.	Inscriptions referring to the Torah Shrine	112
4.3.	Archaeological evidence for the Torah Shrine	116
4.4.	Torah Shrine or Torah Ark.	119
4.5.	Scrolls in late antiquity	120
4.6.	Iconography of the façade motif from funerary contexts	124
4.7.	A closer look at synagogue pavements.	127
4.8.	Depictions of the Torah Shrine on glass	133
4.9.	The façade motif in pagan and Christian contexts	133
4.10.	From iconography to object: the Torah Shrine	135
4.11.	An enlarged façade with columns motif	136
4.12.	Conclusion	139

Chapter Five

Dated Churches in Galilee and the Chancel Screen	141
5.1. Introduction	141
5.2. Historical sources	143
5.3. Churches Dated by Inscription	145
5.3.1. 'Evron 415, 443, and 490 CE	145
5.3.2. Shavei Tzion 486 CE	147
5.3.3. Horvat Esh-Shubeika 513 CE	148
5.3.4. Horvat Hesheq 519 CE	149
5.3.5. Philoteria (Beth Yerach) 528/9 CE	151
5.3.6. Horvat Bata (Carmiel) 543 CE	152
5.3.7. Suhmata 555 CE	154
5.3.8. Beth She'an, Monastery of Kyra Maria c. 567 CE	154
5.3.9. Gerasa Church of Bishop Marianos 570 CE	156
5.3.10. Kursi 582-587 CE	157
5.3.11. Hippos-Sussita Cathedral and Baptistery 591 CE	159
5.4. Dating the Chancel Screen in Churches	160

Chapter Six

Ecclesiastical Furnishings in Synagogues	162
6.1. Introduction: apses and ecclesiastical furnishings in fourth to sixth century synagogues	162
6.2. Written sources for platforms in synagogues	165
6.2.1. The platform in rabbinic liturgical discussion	167
6.3. Archaeological evidence for the raised platforms in synagogues	170
6.3.1. Platforms in a range of sizes (Table 6.1)	172
6.4. Another type of small, stepped platform	188
6.4.1. Written evidence for an ambo in the synagogue	188
6.4.2. The Seat of the Elder at Dura-Europos	189
6.4.3. Was there a wooden platform in the synagogue at Dura-Europos?	189
6.5. Archaeological evidence from Palestine for an ambo in synagogues	191
6.6. The place where the Word is read aloud: sources on the ambo in early churches	193
6.7. Chancel screens: marking the 'sacred space' in churches	194
6.7.1. Evidence for chancel screens in the churches of Hagia Sophia and St. Polyeuktos in Constantinople	195

6.8.	Chancel screens in synagogues in late Antique Palestine	196
6.8.1.	Archaeological evidence for chancel screens in synagogues.	196
6.8.2.	Synagogues with chancel screens generally located near cities.	198
6.8.3.	Motives for the introduction of chancel screens into the synagogue.	199
6.9.	The 'Chair of Moses' or Kathedra in synagogues.	201
6.10.	Conclusion.	202

Chapter Seven

	The Niche and the Apse in Synagogues	205
7.1.	Introduction: Where were the Holy Scrolls kept in the ancient synagogue?	205
7.2.	Semicircular niches in synagogues.	210
7.2.1.	Dura-Europos	210
7.2.2.	Eshtemo'a	212
7.2.3.	Susiya.	213
7.2.4.	Arbel in Galilee	213
7.2.5.	Nawa in Syria	214
7.3.	Rectangular niche	215
7.3.1.	Horvat Rimmon	216
7.3.2.	Blocked Doorways at Beth She'arim and 'En Gedi.	216
7.4.	Rectangular chambers as the synagogue's focal point	218
7.4.1.	Chambers at Hammat Tiberias, and Horvat Sumaqa	218
7.4.2.	Rectangular recesses at Gerasa and Horvat Ma'on	220
7.5.	Apses in churches and synagogues	222
7.5.1.	Assumptions concerning apses in synagogues.	223
7.5.2.	Some explanations for the appearance of the apse in synagogues.	226
7.6.	The appearance of the apse as an architectural feature in synagogues in relation to Byzantine liturgical practice	228
7.6.1.	The First Entrance of the Gospel and Hetoimasia	229
7.7.	Artistic Representations of The First Entrance and The Gospel Enthroned	232
7.7.1.	Imagery of the imperial throne	232
7.7.2.	The Word of God	233

7.8. Competition with Christianity and adaptation in the synagogue	234
Conclusion	236
Appendix A
On Vitruvius, a synagogue, and five churches in the Provinces of Syria and Palestine	243
A.1. Introduction: Vitruvius and design	243
A.1.1. Names of builders and their titles	244
A.1.2. Inscriptions from Syria	246
A.2. Methodology	246
A.3. Churches with identical dimensions	248
A.3.1. Churches at Nawa and Sugane in Syria	249
A.3.2. Identical plans at Mampsis in Palestina Tertia and et-Tuba, in Syria	251
A.3.3. The southern church at Burdaqli in Syria	254
A.3.4. The synagogue at Ma'oz Hayyim, Palestine Secunda	256
A.4. Conclusion	257
Table A:1. Metrology of Churches and Synagogues	259
Bibliography	273
Archaeological Evidence for Ancient Synagogues:
The Catalogue	299