

Contents

Preface VII

Acknowledgments XII

Introduction: Methods and Models 1

PART 1

“Like an Israelite in Every Respect”: The Conversion Procedure

1 The Babylonian “Mini-Tractate” of Conversion 27

2 The Invention of the Conversion Court 46

3 Immersion and Circumcision 57

4 Sinai as Conversion: Acceptance of the Commandments 68

PART 2

“Like a Scab”: Negative Attitudes toward Converts and Conversion

5 “Like a Scab”: A Babylonian Expression 83

6 Converting Missionary Images 102

7 Hillel and Shammai Revisited 117

Appendix 7.1 Hillel and Shammai: Comparison Charts 134

PART 3

“Like a Newborn”: The Erasure of the Convert’s Past

8 Newborn: Conversion and the Severing of Kinship 147

Appendix 8.1 The Severing of Maternal Relations in Palestinian Sources 167

Appendix 8.2 A Palestinian Concept in a Geonic Text? 169

9 Newborn: From Forgiveness of Sins to a New Personality 171

PART 4Contextualizing the Talmud "Against its Will"

- 10 Dominantization: The Rabbinic Conversion of Judaism 183
- 11 Legalization, Rabbinization and the Shift of Authority 197
- 12 Genealogical Anxiety and the Body: The Iranian Context 215

Conclusion—A Newborn, an Israelite, a Scab: The Babylonian Convert 227

Appendix—The Conversion Mini-Tractate: Annotated Texts 231

- 1 The Preceding Narrative 231
- 2 The First Baraita: The Requirement for Both Immersion and Circumcision 241
- 3 The Second Baraita: The Case of Circumcision without Immersion 257
- 4 The Third Baraita: Witnessed Conversion 260
- 5 The Fourth Baraita: The Conversion Court 263
- 6 The Fifth Baraita: The Procedure of Conversion 270
- 7 The Sixth Baraita: A Theological Reflection on the Suffering of Converts 276
- 8 The Meimrot of Rabbi Hiyya bar Abba in the Name of Rabbi Yohanan 277
- 9 Conversion at Night and the Conversion Court 281

Bibliography 285

Index of Sources 304

Index of Names 313

Index of Subjects 316