CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction 1

What Is Crime? 5

Why Crime? 6

Methodology and Methodological Issues 8

Historical Context 11

The Concepts of Crime and Punishment in Medieval Europe 12

Temporal and Geographical Scope 19

The Scarcity of Historical Information 22

The History of Medieval Crime 25

The History of Jewish Medieval Crime 27

The Sources 28

The Plan of This Book 31

1. "The Thieves That Go from House to House": Jewish Thieves in Medieval Europe 35

A Time of Great Risk, Opportunity, and Change: The Late Tenth and Early to Mid-Eleventh Century 37

A Guilty Conscience Needs No Accuser? 71

For We Can Do No Wrong: Jewish Communal Regulations on Theft 77

Stealing from Jews 81

Using Magic to Steal 90

People of the Book: The Rough Waters and the Solemn Banks of the Stolen Hebrew Book Market 92

Battling Theft by Preaching 103

Theft within and from the Community 108

2. "Be Gone Thou Man of Blood": Murder and Murderers in Medieval European Jewish Society 115

An Israelite and a Levi on the Edge of Tzarfat: A Case from Limoges, Late Tenth Century 120

The Status of a Murderer: What's in a Gaze? 128

"He Who Kills in Our Times": From the Gaonic Period to Fifteenth-Century Europe 131

Lethal Inclinations, Gentiles, and Exile: The Homilies of Rabbi Judah the Pious 136

A Murderer in Our Midst: Addressing Extreme Violence in the Community 149

3. Women and Crime 191

Methodological Problems 194

Prostitution 197

Violence in the Domestic Sphere 244

Conclusion 257

Appendix 1: "Lest She Go Astray" 265
Appendix 2: The Plundered Goods Caravan 267
Appendix 3: The Renegade Cleric 269
Appendix 4: Letter of Deliverance 271
Appendix 5: The Case from Poland 275
Appendix 6: The Manual of Penance 277
Appendix 7: A Ḥazan Who Has Killed a Soul 283
Appendix 8: A Responsum by Meir of Rothenburg 285
Appendix 9: The Death of the Wife of Milo 289
Appendix 10: A Responsum by Rabbi Haim Eliezer Or Zarua' 291
Appendix 11: The Case of Isaac and Sara 295

Notes 299
Bibliography 391
Citations Index 427
General Index 431